Description

Description:

Adrien Gagnon Feminex Iron prevents iron-deficiency anemia, fatigue and pale complexion. This supplement is made from an organic source of iron called iron gluconate, which is easily assimilated and does not provoke constipation. It also contains B Complex vitamins that contribute to hemoglobin formation and combats against fatigue and depressive tendencies.

During menstrual periods, women tend to loose some of their iron reserves. Unless blood loss is minimal, women will inevitably lose the iron contained in their hemoglobin. This situation partly explains why women generally show lower hemoglobin levels than men. One would have to be vigilant on a normal diet to compensate for the body's loss of iron while periods last. That is why, it can be helpful to take a supplement such as FEMINEX IRON.
